SOUTHERN PROTECTION INSURANCE COMPANY,

ALEXANDRIA, VIRGINIA. CAPITAL OVER 350,000 DOLLARS, AND CONSTANTLY INCREASING. The Charter of this Company offers more favorable advantages to the farmer and others, than any Company chartered in the State, by insuring with or without a premium note. If the applicant prefer, he can pay the full amount of the premium in cash, or by effecting a cash insurance for two years, the insured saves one-eighth of the amount he would otherwise have to pay; or by becoming a member, and giving a small premium note, the insured saves nearly one-half of the amount charge by Stock Companies, when insuring from year to year. This is the advantage resulting from the combination of the CASH AND MUTUAL PRINCIPLE. This Company commenced issuing Policies against loss or damage by fire, on the 13th day of March, 1854, since which time over seven thousand seven bundred persons have insured and become members of the Company, and over seventy thousand dollars have been paid for losses. Having increased our business during the past year, we feel grateful for the liberal patronage bestowed upon the Company thus far, and for its flattering prospeets of future usefulness. The Directors hope and believe, that, by prudence, caution, and a rigid system of economy, they will establish for this Company a reputation for cheapness and safety not surpassed by any Company in the U. States. All differences in settlement of losses, may be determined by three disinterested arbitrators of the

THE MEETING ON FRIDAY NIGHT .- The citizens meeting, on Friday night, noticed in Saturday's Gazette, for the purpose of adopting measures for furthering the objects of the Potomac, Piedmont and Valley Agricultural Society, by a subscription on the part | the River trade had been lost to Alexanof the city to the Society, to enable it to hold a fair the coming Fall, was not as numerously attended, as was expected, though towards the close, the number present had very perceptibly increased. At 8½ o'clock, Isaac Kell called to the Chair, W. H. Fowle, and on motion of the same gentleman, Edgar Snowden, Jr., was appointed Secretary. Mr. Fowle on taking the Chair, stated the bject for which the meeting had been called, and called up R. W. N. Noland, of Albemarle, who explained in a clear and forcible speech, the great benefits that must accrue to Alexandria from the holding of a Fair, such as was proposed by the Agricultural Society. It would attract to the city, he thought, not less than ten thousand persons, and unless the farmers of Virginia had learned very recently the art of strict economy, which he did not think they had, from $75,000 to $100,000 would be spent here by the visiters. All classes would feel the benefit, the merchant, the mechanic, artizan, laborer, and all would realize the good effects produced by congregating here annually such a crowd as would attend the Fair. Another great object attained would be the introduction to our merchants of an entirely new class of customers, persons now brought within the reach of Alexandria influence by the opening of her Railroads, and who once brought here and permitted to see our city, become acquainted with our people, and examine our superior commercial advantages, would make this their market, as it naturally was, and thus make Alexandria instead of what it is now, one of the most flourishing cities in the country. The speaker cited Richmond, Lynchburg, Wheeling, Petersburg, and other places, that had subscribed liberally for the purpose of getting up and holding similar fairs, to show the great advantages to be derived. Lynchburg, he said, was by her liberal policy already going ahead rapidly, and unless the people of Alexandria awake to their true interests, and hold out inducements to attract the people from that section of country just opened to us, by our Railroads, we would rapidly fall behind hand, and business men of Lynchburg, worn out with the active duties of that place would seek relaxation from business in the quiet town of Alexandria. He said that those cities that had offered to subscribe large sums for the purpose of inducing the State Society to hold its annual Fairs in their midst, did not make these offers or subscribe these amounts for the honor, but for the sake of profit, and he believed that the Corporation would make a good thing of it by taking the control of the grounds, and fitting them up, so as to draw hither the crowd. Hither the Northern man would come to sell-for he well knows that Virginians would buy anything from a "fast trotter" to a he goat, or from a steam engine to a tooth-pick-and hither the Southerner would come to buy. The location of Alexandria as a place for holding an Agricultural Fair could not be excelled easy of access, a larger and more varied collection of animals, machinery, &c., would be brought here than could be found at any other fair. There was not, the speaker continued, sufficient attractions held out to the country people-they wished to go where a crowd was THE GREAT EASTERN STEAMSHIP OFF with full instructions, and advice, will please call assembled, and once get them in the way of going to any particular point, and there was no danger that there would be a falling off. The speaker concluded by hoping that Alexandria either in her corporate capacity, or by a liberal subscription on the part of her citizens individually, would come to the assistance of the Society, and enable them to have an exhibition, this Fall. The Chairman next called upon John A. Washington, President of the Agricultural Society, who rose and made a strong appeal in behalf of the Society. He considered it all important that the Society should hold a Fair this Fall. The city must set the example by a subscription before we could expect anything from the country or other places. He gave a very interesting account of a visit to the Agricultural Fair at St. Louis, and of the immense advantage that city derived from the Fair. While he did not desire to create the impression that a Fair here would attract anything like the number of people that were annually gathered together at St. Louis, yet in proportion to the size of the two places and other things considered, we would derive, in proportion, an equal advan-tage. He thought that 15,000 was a low estimate for the number that would attend, and all could see at a glance the great benefit that would accrue to the city. He was more deeply interested in Alexandria than in any city in the country. Here was his market. What he bought, he bought herewhat he sold, was sold here-he had always and returning. liked it, and its people, and he was now advocating her cause. It would, he thought, be a great blunder if the people did not seize this advantage to render profitable and give permanence to all the works of improvement, in which we have so deep an interest, and if this opportunity was allowed to slip-the delay would be deeply regretted when our citizens saw other places reaping the harvest which we had sown. He hoped that some plan would at once be devised for securing a subscription on the part of the city to the Society, so as to enable them to Look-Out in eight hours, making the trip down early, so as to insure promptness when called go on with the work, and open the Fair this this beautiful river by day-light.

The following resolutions, as published in Saturday's Gazette, were then offered by E.

F. Witmer: Resolved. That in the opinion of this meeting, the City Council of Alexandria would consult the interests of this community, by advancing the Bonds of the Corporation to the extent of $10,000, to the Potomac, Piedmont, and Valley Agricultural Society, payable at such time as may be deemed expedient-said Society agreeing to pay annually the interest thereon, and a sufficient sum in addition to retire the Bonds at their maturity Resolved, That a Committee be appointed to btain from our citizens the sums necessary to pay the interest, and create the sinking fund for the purposes designated above.

An adjourned meeting of this Association was held at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association, Thursday evening, (the 2nd inst.,) at 8 o'clock.

The meeting was called to order by G Powell Hill, Chairman, and in the absence of the Secretary, Lyttleton Withers was appointed to act as such.

The reports of committees being the first business in order, that of the Committee on Constitution and By-Laws was read, and each article acted upon separately.

A warm discussion thereupon ensued, arising from an amendment offered by W. A. Duncan to the 4th article of the report. A motion prevailed to lay said report on the table until the report of the Committee on Rooms, &c., could be received-but not being prepared to make a full report, said Committee was continued, and requested to a great boon.

THE NAPOLEON FAMILY.—The silly stories set afloat, from time to time, as to the legitimacy of the Emperor Louis Napoleon are somewhat strange, when history and the improbability of the truth of such statements are taken into consideration. The last and most ridiculous of all is the statement that among the papers of Prince Jerome were found letters from Louis Bonaparte, late King of Holland, denying the legitimacy of Napoleon the Third, and that these papers were sent to England for safe keeping. If such statements were true, is Louis Napoleon the man to let them out of his clutches? The father of Napoleon the Third, the late King of Holland, in his own writings and under his own signature, treats these unfounded statements as they deserve, with contempt. When he, Louis Bonaparte, was on his death bed, and his son, now on the throne of France, was in prison in the fortress of Ham, he wrote an appeal to the French Government to allow his son, Louis Napoleon, to visit him before he closed his eyes in death, or, in his own words, "to hold him once more in his arms." This was a parental appeal-not one to press a bastard to his bosom; this appeal was the cause of Louis Napoleon effecting his escape from his dark and dreary prison, if we can believe his own statements. Those who are familiar with the portraits of Louis Bonaparte will readily discover the resemblance between him and his son, the Emperor of the French; the leady appearace of the eye especially attracts the attention of the beholder; the cheek bones and lips, as well as the general outline of the head and face, cannot well be mistaken. His walk, too, is much like his father before he became afflicted, paralyzed .- Cor. N. Y. Herald.

The cellular spaces thus produced absorbed sound. Some highly cellular texture may be applied to walls, cellings, and doors, which s and ordinary decay, allow of finisn, and yet deaden sound. Who is to invent and introduce such materials? They may patent the invention and make a fortune, if they will only abate the existing nuisance and enable us to have solid parti-walls and fire proof floors, without being compelled to hear what is going on up stairs and in the next house.
